

TMC Membership Application TMC Membership Application

Full Fleet Membership: open to individuals whose primary responsibility is to select and/or maintain commercial motor vehicles and components for motor carrier fleet operations. Participation in this membership category requires that the first individual from a company be designated the Fleet Executive member and then all others from that same company may join as Fleet Additional members. (Note: motor carrier companies with active membership in the American Trucking Associations receive a discount on annual dues.) Members of the trade press and educators also qualify for full/fleet membership at special rates (see below for details).

Associate Membership: open to individuals whose primary responsibility is the design, manufacture or sale of a product or service to the trucking industry. This includes Federal and state agencies, representatives of other conferences, councils, institutes, associations and consultants whose activities are consistent with the purpose and objectives of TMC. Participation in this membership category requires that the first individual from a company be designated the Associate Corporate member and then all others from that same company may join as Associate Additional members.

Service Provider Membership: open to individuals affiliated with any truck or trailer repair shop engaged in the maintenance of commercial motor vehicles. Participation in this membership category requires that the first individual from a company be designated the Service Provider Corporate member and then all others from that same company may join as Service Provider Additional members.

Owner-Operators: open to individuals who own and maintain five or fewer commercial motor vehicles.

Technicians: open to individuals who work as professional service technicians employed by companies in the commercial vehicle industry. Students training for a career as a professional technician may also join under this membership category at a special rate (see below for details).

What is TMC & What Does It Do? What is TMC & What Does It Do?

The Technology & Maintenance Council is a diverse group of industry professionals who work together to improve truck equipment and technology. TMC develops industry-recognized recommended practices that are used by fleet managers to efficiently specify and maintain vehicles. TMC's industry best practices also provide guidance to manufacturers in the design of their equipment. TMC began in 1956 when a small, but select group of maintenance directors sat down with representatives from the truck manufacturing community to discuss recurring equipment maintenance problems. Since then, TMC has grown into an organization of more than 2,300 members with representatives from virtually every sector of the industry: fleets, owner/operators, manufacturers, suppliers, service providers, educators, press, association representatives and technicians.

What Industry Experts Have to Say What Industry Experts Have to Say

"There is no other organization where a fleet manager can find so many answers to their questions and opportunities to network with peers who face the same challenges or already have a solution to an issue that they are willing to share. Along with the knowledge you gain from other fleet managers, there is no other meeting that I know of that both manufacturers and vendors are represented by not only senior sales staff, but also the engineers that helped design and test the products they represent. I have gained a wealth of knowledge from the other members of this organization and over the years acquired a lot of life long friends." - J. David Foster, VP of Maintenance, Southeastern Freight Lines (TMC member since 1990).

"Any transportation maintenance professional - no matter fleet size - will gain from TMC membership. The industry networking opportunities, knowledge gained, from not only sharing ideas with peers, but having access to the "who's who" in the transportation sector from both the fleet side and supplier side alike, is incredible. Like all organizations, what you put into it, is what you get out!" - Steph Sabo, Maintenance Mgr., Norrenberns Truck Service (TMC member since 1999).

What Benefits Do You Enjoy as a Member?
