

Content Disclaimer/Participant Agreement

American Trucking Associations, Inc. (“ATA”) has established this blog web site to allow public discourse over the Internet on issues of interest to the American trucking industry. The views and opinions expressed in any posting on this site reflect the views only of the author and not necessarily of ATA. ATA has the right to monitor, prescreen, or otherwise control the content of the blog, but readers and contributors to the blog recognize that ATA is under no legal obligation to do so. ATA, at its sole discretion, may refuse to publish or remove any user content that it believes inappropriate for any reason. Any user/contributor to the blog agrees that they are responsible for the content of their postings and are responsible to ensure that content complies with all applicable laws and regulations and is accurate, truthful and up to date. ATA does not ratify or endorse in any way the contents of any posting on the blog and is not responsible for the accuracy of the information supplied. ATA specifically disclaims any and all liability for any damages alleged to have been incurred related access to; use of; or information posted on the blog. This blog web site is protected by U.S. and international copyright laws and by posting comments, users are deemed to surrender any copyright and related intellectual property rights to ATA.